If you can't think of anyone from the music world who made a difference, you can explore one of the following tips:

Moby is a well known animal activist who has been advocating for animal rights for almost two decades. He has worked with groups like PETA and Humane Society to raise awareness for causes like the abuse of livestock in factory-run farms to turkey-free Thanksgiving dinners. Last year he opened up Little Pine, a vegan restaurant in Los Angeles and donated all profit to animal rights organizations. He has also written personal essays about the benefit of the vegan lifestyle.

Taylor Swift spreads her philanthropy across various organizations – some are large, international nonprofits that provide help to people all over the world. But some are small-scale donations that she supports that are close to home.

If you'd rather write about a song that demonstrates true songwriting talent, you can choose the alternative assignment from WB 10 – 11

If none of these topics is relatable to you, choose the following:

You have read the following opinion in a social media discussion:

Music as a school subject should be only optional from 6th grade on. Children and teens nowadays have access to any music they want on the internet. Knowledge of music theory is not an important life skill. Compulsory music lessons just waste young people's time and should not be part of the national curriculum.

Do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

Write an essay, discussing arguments for and against removing compulsory music lessons from the national curriculum from 6th grade on.

Your essay should have 140 – 190 words. (That is the required length in the First for Schools B2 exam)
